THE INTELLIGENCER.

WHEELING, JUNE 22, 1899.

Their Greatest Monument. West Virginia entered upon the thirty-seventh year of its existence as a state yesterday. While every citizen of forty years is older than the state, most of the fathers who led in its creation have passed away. Their best and most lasting monument, one which is growing in dimensions each year, is the state About all of them, however, were permitted to see that memorial be-fore they departed, while thousands of those who held up their hands and supported them are still witnessing its increasing growth, and will continue to witness it for years to come.

They have witnessed the population Increase in thirty-six years from 375,000 to nearly a million, the estimate made for next year's census; they have beheld the development of West Virginia's vast internal resources, the opening of a wilderness by capital, the building of railroads and the bringing in touch with the markets, east, west, north and south, the wealth contained in the hills and the mountains, and on the tops of them, and in the valleys; they watched the growth of cities and towns that were but villages, and the advancement in education and general progress.

They will live to see West Virginia one of the first states of the Union in points of wealth, intelligence, influence, population and power-a lasting, living monument to the men whose work was consummated by the proclamation of President Lincoln on the 20th day of April, 1863, which made the new state a member of the Federal Union sixty days

Might Solve the Problem.

The British press is not unanimous in its support of the government's policy in the Transvaal crists. The London Spectator does not agree that there is sufficient cause for war, though it admits that it may come. The Spectator makes the point, in an article quoted in the eastern press, that it is right to ad-mit that the rejection of the franchise proposals do not constitute a war case, as the British government has no right to claim that the Transvani government's refusal to permit the Oultsland ers to vote justifies action. The Spectator thinks the best solution of the problem is to warr, the Transvaa! government that England will hold it responsible for outbreaks of disorder in Johannesburg, and that the "repressive means adopted, will be closely watched, on the ground that England will afford every protection to British subjects."

The Spectator thinks that the British power should give the Transvaal govit must "put its house in order in the only way in which good government can be permanently secured; that the blame for any breakdown of the system will be visited on the Transvaal officials, and that they will not be allowed to plead turbulence of British subjects, as an excuse for repressive acts." is British conservatism, as expressed by a British paper. It suggests a policy which might have the desired effect, and then, again, it might not. It is likely that it would make clear enough to the Transvaal government that, by the strict observance of the warning, hostilities can be averted, and in no other way. British power is mighty, notwithstanding President Kruger's defiant attitude.

McKinley on Educated Womanhood.

The splendid ovations that are being tendered to President McKinley in Massachusetts are sufficient evidence of the personal esteem in which he is held by the people of the old Bay State. The President seems to have lost none of his popularity up there, in spite of the atti-tude of the leading papers of the state regarding the policy he has pursued in the far east. The critics have made little impression upon the popular mind. But aside from this feature of the President's visit, are the happy speeches he has made on several occasions, which contain so many sentiments that are characteristic of his broadmindedness and progressiveness on general lines. In his graceful speech accepting the honor the degree conferred upon him by Holyoke College, where he delivered the and in the standard of instruction, the diplomas to the graduates, the Presi-teroliment for the year just closed bedent took occasion to pay tribute to ing 327. The catalogue is profusely "educated womanhood," ing so much progress in this country. ings and grounds and the handsome large. "I am glad," said the President, "that we are demonstrating in the United States to-day that the boy shall have no more advantages than the girl. An educated womanhood is an open school for citizenship every day in the year, and the home is the training school for the mother, the soldler and the statesman."

Wants to Buy Ireland.

"An eminent New York financier," whose name is not given, has written to a leader of the Irish Parliamentary party proposing to buy Ireland from British government, pay $100,000,000 for the island and make it free. He admits, however, that "the whole question must hinge upon the desire of Great Britain to dispose of the property.' Possibly it does; and possibly the emi-nent American financier, who seems to think "that all things are possible in this age, and that in America nothing is too big for us to undertake," has a great deal to learn about Great Britain's desire as to letting go a portion of its home territory.

Possibly, if this gentleman has a hundred millions to spare for such a pur-chase, the Irish people would be grateful to have him use it in that way, but he would be obliged to convince the Queen's cabinet that a territory of 32,000 square miles, containing a population of 5,000,000 of tax-payers, who are helping to support the empire, a vast amount of property, some large and important cities, and a few more things, is only worth $100,000,000. The eminent financler might have to go a great deal further down in his pocket-book before he could accomplish his purpose.

The Export Exposition.

One of the great events of the year will be Philadelphia's big export exposition, which it to open on the 14th of September and close on the 30th of November. It will be of much importance to the manufacturing and commercial interests of this country, and will attract thousands of visitors from the industrial centres, and a number of forelgn countries, with which we relations, will be fully represented.

One of the features of the exposition will be the meeting of the international commercial congress, at which leading men of the United States and foreign countries will be among the delegates. Among those who have accepted invitais Lord Salisbury, the British prime minister, and England and several of her colonies will be officially represented. Delegates will attend from Asiatic, European and all the South and North American countries, and Australia. No more notable gathering of industrial and commercial interests ever assembled than this congress will be, and great good is sure to result to our already expanding trade.

It is true that the Wheeling base ball team is temporarily at the "tail end" of the record of the inter-state league, but when the New Castle Courant-Guardian says Wheeling only has a population of 20,000, it is respectfully referred to the census reports. Wheeling not only has a population of twice 26,000, but it is the centre of communities of more than 70,-000, with only state and county lines preventing them all from being one city and that city a Greater Wheeling. Our New Castle contemporary is referred to a map of Wheeling and Benwood, W. Va., and Bellaire, Bridgeport and Martin's Ferry, Ohio, and numerous other adjacent towns, all but for the lines mentioned virtually one combined city. Our ball team may not be the biggest thing on earth, but the commu-nity mentioned could annex New Castle and it would only constitute an addi-

If the report is true that no evidence will be offered against Dreyfus, and that he will be discharged and leave France to spend his life in some other country, perhaps America, it will briefly end the remarkable tragedy in which he has been the chief figure. A retrial would be but a farce, at most, and the course referred to would avoid some startling revelations, to the discredit of some Frenchmen. Perhaps it would also avert a more serious crisis than that which already confronts the republic, notwithstanding the popularity of Lou-bet and his fair policy in the matter. Should Drevfus come to America, he will find a haven of refuge in which the erament firm and specific warning that people have almost unanimously given him hearty sympathy in his persecu

> If the street car strike doesn't end pretty soon, or if the patronage isn't resumed, the automobile will make its ap pearance and solve the problem. It is fast gaining headway in the larger cities, and, like the bicycle when it first appeared, is winning its way. In a very short time it will become epidemic. The manufacturers are overwhelmed with orders, and it will be, at no distant time, but a step from the private horseless carriage to the public conveyance The epidemic hasn't touched Wheeling yet, but Wheeling's very name is suggestive that it may fall an early victim

> One of the back-number Democratic organs of this state, the Point Pleasant Register, has awakened from its Demo cratic slumber long enough to inquire why Republican papers are not discussing the wool question. When our good Republican friend, the Moundsville Herald, notified the Point Pleasant organ that during its state of inanition since the repeal of the Wilson tariff. wool has advanced about 100 per cent, the down-the-river contemporary relapsed into another sleep, and the Her-ald is unable to revive it.
